

On November 26, 2020, OIG Interim Deputy Inspector General Alyssa Perez-Morisson and myself, went to the office previously occupied by former SPD employee Jamie Tompkins at SPD Headquarters. The purpose of this visit was to look for additional identifiable handwriting samples relating to case 2023OPA-0286.

Taken from the office were two notebooks containing some handwriting, three file folders with handwriting on them, one packet of papers stapled together titled "In Pursuit" with handwriting on the title page, and photographs of writing on the whiteboards in the office.

We found the office was not secured with the door standing open. There appeared to be different styles of handwriting found in various locations around the room and to our understanding, the office had already been cleaned out by an SPD administrative assistant. None of the exemplars found were signed or otherwise directly identifiable as Ms. Tompkins'.

Giving consideration to the above factors, it is OIG's assessment that the handwriting samples collected on this day are of no evidentiary value beyond those already been collected by OIG.
